

John Joint

John Joint is an internationally experienced consultant and coach, working at board level across a range of industries and organisations for over 10 years.

John's background

John was born in Brussels of British parents and has lived and worked in many countries around the world. As a result he has a truly international perspective, working comfortably in different cultures and speaking Spanish, French, English and some German.

"I can only describe the changes that we achieved in a few short hours as truly magical. With his rampant curiosity and mastery of his craft John enabled me to achieve far more than I had thought would ever be possible let alone in one session!"

"John is a great stealth coach. You don't realise how much progress you have made till you look back and see where you started from."

"John's help and support can change your approach to life and business completely. A step-change to the next level is easily made using his work, lessons and advice."

"John Joint showed me a clear and novel approach to addressing conflicting demands in life."

As a Chartered Engineer he spent twenty-three years with the Royal Air Force, in executive roles and international projects, before joining PricewaterhouseCoopers, helping them to build their consulting services across Europe. He was then instrumental in growing their European HR Development programmes, for partners and managers from all over Europe. This experience has given John a broad business understanding, in particular the critical importance of developing people for successful businesses. He is a rare breed in the coaching arena, having first hand experience of Leadership, Business Development and People Development, combining his business and systemic thinking with a deep understanding of peoples' behaviours.

John's passion

John's passion is enabling people to achieve their goals, individually or in teams, and he has brought this approach to personal performance coaching. John's strengths are his ability to work across boundaries and to bring new perspectives to problems. In particular he has considerable expertise and success in building international teams and networks of people working together effectively. His style is facilitative and his approach to conflict resolution is win-win, thriving on diversity and always looking for creative solutions to complex problems.

John's style

John brings compassion and empathy coupled with a readiness to make success fun. In creating a supportive environment he provides the space for individuals or groups to grow. His warmth, enthusiasm and humour make it possible for his clients to focus on creating effective results, providing insights and guiding them through change. John is a Master Practitioner and Trainer of NLP, and a Practitioner of Symbolic Modelling.
